GENERAL MOTORS POLICY DISCUSSED

Closer Working Arrangement Planned by Committees in Joint Meet.

[By Associated Press.]
Detroit—Policies which will shape the future of General Motors corporation were discussed Friday at a joint meeting of the executive committee and the operating committee in the new General Motors building in Detroit.

Those present comprising the executive committee were: Harry S. Dugan, chairman; J. A. Haskell, Jr., J. R. Roper and Alfred P. Sloan, Jr. The operating committee consists of chief executives of the most important producing companies and members of the general advisory staff, headed by C. S. Mott. Representing various General Motors companies were: H. H. Bassett, Buick; W. W. Zimmerman, Chevrolet; H. H. Rice, Cadillac; A. B. C. Hardy, Oldsmobile; Geo. Hannum, Oakland; W. L. Day, G. M. C. Truck; J. A. Craig, Samson Truck; DeWitt Page, New Departure; Mrs. G. W. J. Fisher, Fisher Body Corporation; C. F. Kettering, Dayton Engine Laboratories; R. S. McLaughlin, McLaughlin Motor Car Co., Oakland; J. L. Pratt, Accessory Group; E. P. Johnson, Inter-Company Parts Group.

New Policy Followed.
The meeting was directly in line with an important new policy which provides for an even closer working arrangement among the executive heads of the corporation and the constituent companies. The magnitude of the operations involved is indicated by the fact that the General Motors now includes 78 divisions, subsidiaries and affiliated companies.

It is regarded as significant that the most important conferences are being transferred from New York to the center of production activities in Detroit. In other words, the men of large affairs who control the destinies of General Motors, are getting closer to the firing line and into more direct contact with the actual making and selling of motor vehicles and kindred products.

Joint meetings of the executive and operations committees are scheduled to take place at frequent intervals in Detroit.

The movement to bring about a closer coordination of the production activities of the Corporation was inaugurated soon after the du Pont interests assumed a commanding position in General Motors affairs and the net tangible results have been registered in lowered costs, improved quality and increased production. The same principle is now being applied to the merchandising activities.

Yanks Bump Japs' Scheme for Net Title

Forest Hills, N. Y.—Japan's tennis masters, Kumazawa and Shimidzu, with two defeats chalked against them in their battle for the Davis cup meet the Yankies doubles team in the third match of the series this afternoon and in victory lies their only hope of prolonging the fray.

Their opponents this afternoon, Watson M. Washburn and R. N. Norris Williams II, are known as one of the most formidable doubles teams in the world and are favored many of the experts.

Suzanne Lenglen will appear in an exhibition mixed doubles event following the Davis cup match. Paired with Vincent Richards, the national junior champion, she will meet Mrs. May Sutton Bundy of Los Angeles and Willis D. Davis, San Francisco.

Francis Williams M. Johnson of San Francisco, national champ in 1915 and 1919, defeated Ichaya Kumazawa in straight sets, 6-2, 6-4, 6-2. Williams T. Riden II, Philadelphia, present American title holder and a far more difficult task in subduing Zenzo Shimidzu in a five-set battle by scores of 5-7, 4-6, 7-5, 6-2, 6-1.

morning to the affected area for observation purposes.
All men found to be unlawfully assembled in the affected areas will be dispersed if they are carrying weapons, and ordered to return to their homes. No one will be permitted to bear arms and all ammunition will be confiscated. No arrests will be made except where persons resist the orders of the federal soldiers or to argue. Full protection will be given to all miners and others. It had been charged that many of the men assembled in firing line would have gone home but for fear of being attacked by state forces.

COMPARATIVELY QUIET ON SPRUCE FORK RIDGE

Logan, W. Va.—Col. Eubank, commanding the state and county forces in Logan county, announced at noon that reports reaching him from Spruce Fork ridge said the situation there had been comparatively quiet. The only concentration of forces on the east side of the mountains of which he has any knowledge, he added, was at Blair. There were reports that a number of men from the "army" opposed to the state and county forces had been brought here wounded. Having fallen in Friday's fight, and that some of them had died. No details were given by the authorities.

MINERS WILL ASK FOR CONGRESSIONAL QUIZ

Charleston, W. Va.—Efforts will be made by the United Mine Workers to have the senate committee, which will meet Sept. 13 to investigate the mining situation in Minnegate, W. Va., broaden the scope of its inquiry to include the area now being occupied by federal troops.

Philip Murray, international vice president of the union, has said he would go before the committee and ask that it inquire into the situation in Boone, Logan, McDowell and other counties where miners have been at odds with the coal companies.

Failing in this, Murray said he would bring the situation before the miners' national convention at Indianapolis, Sept. 20, to have it request President Harding to use his good offices to have the senate committee broaden its inquiry or have another committee appointed.

REGULARS ARRIVE AT SCENE OF DISTURBANCE

Charleston, W. Va.—The remaining troops ordered into the disturbed counties of the southwestern part of the state arrived Saturday and took up positions designated by Brig. Gen. H. H. Bandholtz. The first of the troops arrived Friday night in Madison Boone county, behind the lines of the armed bands further up the mountain at the Logan county line.

Federal and state military authorities believed Saturday will see the end of the belligerency on the Boone-Logan boundary line and the miners and others gathered there to resist dispersal and return to their homes under the protection of the federal troops.

International Vice President Philip Murray of the United Mine Workers expressed his personal judgment in a statement Friday night, that the presence of federal troops will result in immediate quiet being restored.

Will Welcome Troops.
"The men will welcome the federal troops with open arms," he said. District Vice President William P. Fry of Charleston said he had assurance from the men that they would not oppose the regular troops and would obey their orders and regulations.

General Bandholtz did not anticipate meeting any trouble and it is not expected the 2,000 troops held in reserve in army camps will be needed.

There were reports here early Saturday that a movement toward home was in progress late Friday. It was expected the federal authorities would arrive at a decision Saturday, on the question of declaring some form of martial law in the counties of Kanawha, Boone, Logan and Mingo.

THEATERS ALL OPEN FOR FALL SEASON

Myers to Present New Front and Big Vaudeville Show Monday.

"The people of Janesville will not have to wonder whether there is going to be a good show at the Myers theatre," declared Manager Charles G. Boutin Saturday. "Our contracts to book with the Marcus Loew circuit and the Famous Players-Lasky corporation assure them before hand of seeing high class entertainment." Monday will see the reopening of the Myers, entirely redressed in interior decorations, stage effects and plan of management. The new idea will give five acts of vaudeville and a Paramount feature photo play changing twice a week on Mondays and Thursdays.

A new method of performances will be followed. There will be two shows daily at 2:15 and 7:15 p. m. At night the pictures will start at 8:15 and the acts at 9:15. The picture will be run a second time for those coming in late. On Saturday and Sunday nights, there will be two complete performances commencing at 6:30 and 8:45.

Ten big acts are booked to show next week. Topping them will be the Swift and Daley couple. This comes in the first half of the week. "Syncope Feet" by two men and two women; The Davies, comedy jugglers from Australia; the Mack and Dale singing and dancing pair; and Jack Reddy, a singing and talking comedian.

End of Week Show. For the latter part of the week, the star attraction will be a sketch by Harry Mason and company in "Getting the Money." The others will be Rankin, contortionist; Kiefer and Scott, dancers; Victoria and DeFree in an Arabian and American acrobatic stunt.

Manager Boutin will start his first-run photo play scheme with William S. Hart in "O'Malley of the Mounted." This is said to be the third best of the new law of the Great Northwest with Hart starring as the hero of the red-coated Canadian mounted police who guard the borders.

Fatty Arbuckle Coming. Roscoe (Fatty) Arbuckle, one of the most popular of American comedians makes his bow at the Myers in the latter part of the week. He comes in "The Dollar a Year Man." This is a comedy of most laughable humor in which "Fatty" features as a laundryman and amateur detective. A band of anarchists and a prince provide thrills and smiles.

Apollon Attractions. At the Apollo the only part of next week, Janesville presents "The Inside of the Cup." This is a cosmopolitan production from the popular novel by Winston Churchill. It brings forth a powerful romance of plain worth and gilded hypocrisy. Commentators have said that this picture points the way to real existing conditions and the cause of so little being accomplished.

An All-Star Goldwyn Production. "It's a Great Life" will be presented at the Beverly Sunday and Monday. Here's a picture of romance where the elephant makes his home. On Tuesday to Thursday, Bert Lytell appears in "The Man Who."

Breaks Into Courthouse to Get Rum, Claim

Monroe. —Awaiting trial on a charge of violation of the prohibition laws, Frank Sacker, now horse driver, now sits in the county jail on a charge of breaking into the Green county courthouse and confiscating the evidence, consisting of several gallons of moonshine. Sacker is plaintiff in the suit to test the Se-Verston law, which charges Sheriff Buchler with a conspiracy to defame, injure and accuse of crime, and for assault, false arrest and imprisonment.

Some moonshine whiskey had been removed from the basement of the court house Thursday night to the east entrance when Patrolman John Sickinger discovered the material and men apparently awaiting the arrival of a conveyance. Sheriff Buchler and Captain Mitchell were called and Sacker was arrested. Preliminary hearing was set for Sept. 8.

Sickinger claims Sacker offered him a drink of moonshine as he went to his rounds of the court house about 2 a. m. Friday.

REED TO BE TRIED ON SERIOUS CHARGE

Youth Held for Trial Oct. 18—Murphy Case Is Dismissed.

Assurance given by District Attorney S. G. Durawidde some time ago that the state would prosecute the Reed-Murphy assault case if it were possible to secure the 15-year old girl victim to testify, was fulfilled in municipal court here, Friday afternoon.

As a result of the girl's sordid testimony, Thomas Reed must stand trial by jury in municipal court, Oct. 18, unless a change of venue is taken.

Complaint and warrant against Edward Murphy, the second youth arrested following the alleged attack on the girl, were quashed and Murphy was dismissed upon motion of his attorney, W. H. Dougherty. Murphy was charged with having aided Reed to make the attack and to have concealed information as to the offense.

The 15-year old girl was the only witness to testify, in the preliminary examination, Friday. After hearing her story, Judge Maxwell ruled there was reasonable and probable cause to believe the defendant guilty of an offense and as a result Reed was bound over for trial. He remains in his custody under $2,500 bail furnished a month ago.

Big Tim Murphy and Aides Are Reindicted

Chicago.—New indictments were returned late Friday by the federal grand jury against Timothy D. (Big Tim) Murphy and eight others, charging them with conspiracy to defraud the mails. The cases are re-indictments to escape technicalities, except that William Digna Murphy's father-in-law, was named for the first time in this connection in the new bills.

ASSAULT, CHARGE AGAINST HENNING

Barkeeper Has Warrant Issued Against Dr. Agent in Milwaukee.

Milwaukee.—A warrant charging Earl Henning, state prohibition enforcement officer, with assault and battery was issued by John W. Well, clerk of the district court, Saturday on complaint of Vincent Jagowski, 935 Milwaukee avenue, a saloonkeeper.

The warrant charges Henning with assaulting Mrs. Jagowski, 34, while engaged in a search for moonshine. According to the complaint, Henning, accompanied by two other prohibition agents, entered the saloon at 10 a. m. Friday. After searching the saloon without finding liquor, they started to enter the living apartments in the rear of the saloon.

"Don't go in there, my wife is not dressed," Jagowski said, according to his complaint. "You have no search warrant."

Henning smashed the door open with a blow of his fist, knocking Mrs. Jagowski into a chair. It is charged. The agents then continued their search, confiscating two pint bottles of whiskey. One of these, according to the complaint, was obtained on a physician's prescription and the other was a bottle of whiskey. The agents then proceeded to search the living apartments for a long time. He denied having it or any other whiskey for sale.

WANDERING WHEEL MAY COST CITY $50

Damage caused when a year wheel from No. 2 fire truck went on rampage on West Milwaukee street three weeks ago when responding to a box alarm will cost the city $49.75 if the council in meeting Tuesday night allows the bill of Hager & May.

The bill lists damages to the building at 505 West Milwaukee street into which the wheel crashed and a new door and screen door, plastering, painting and 18 hours' carpenter work are itemized in the bill which totals $49.75.

Lewis Gower, 771 Logan street, has filed claim against the city for $37.37 as the total of damage done to painting materials from high water at Wheeler and Sharon streets. He classifies his losses as follows: 5 gallons of oil, 5 gallons turpentine, 186 pounds of paste, 144 pounds of plaster of paris, and 40 pounds of Venetian red.

NURSE TO RESUME VISITS TO SCHOOLS

Sixty interviews on health, visiting of 10 homes, and the sending out of 25 letters are recorded by Miss Anna Luetscher, county nurse, in her report. She reports 55 hours in office work and with Miss Alice Glenn, Red Cross nurse, conducted an exhibit at the Janesville fair. Next week she will have charge of an exhibit at the Rock County fair at Evansville. Considerable work was done during August by Miss Luetscher for the county and municipal courts. With the opening of schools this month, she will resume her county-wide examinations.

Do You Regard The Farmer As A Desirable Risk?

For more than 28 years we have pinned our faith on the integrity of the Western Farmer and have loaned them millions of dollars taking as security first mortgages on their improved farms.

During these years not one of our customers, to whom we have sold these mortgages, has lost one dollar on these investments bought from us. Farmers have had their prosperous and adverse times of course, but every dollar of interest and principal has been paid.

We recommend these farm mortgages and advise you to invest in them now while the rates of interest are 7%.

LODGE NEWS

There will be a special meeting of the Ladies' Auxiliary of the A. O. U. at 4 p. m. Sunday at the chapel of St. Patrick's church. Arrangements will be made to attend the funeral of Mrs. Richard Finley, a former member. It was planned to hold the meeting Saturday night, but later plans changed the time and place.

Ford, Chevrolet Prices Reduced

Detroit.—Edsel Ford, president of the Ford Motor Company, late Friday announced another reduction in prices of all models of Ford automobiles and trucks. This is the third reduction in 12 months.

The reduction follows: Touring, $415 to $355; runabout, $370 to $325; sedan, $750 to $660; coupe, $895 to $855; chassis, $315 to $295; one truck chassis, $495 to $455.

"We are taking advantage of every known economy on the manufacture of our products in order that we may give them to the public at the lowest possible price, and by doing the one big thing that will help this country into more prosperous times," said Edsel in announcing the reductions.

"The production of Ford cars and trucks for August again broke all previous high records with the total reaching 117,606."

The third reduction in Chevrolet "four-ninety" models was announced by the Chevrolet Motor company today. The "four-ninety" touring car and roadster will list at $25 and the coupe and sedan will list at $275, 1. o. b. Flint, effective Friday.

Black Hawk Apartments Are Open for Tenants With Building Complete

The Black Hawk apartments, the latest apartment building to be added to Janesville, is open and tenants are moving in. The final touches have been made on the building and an air of neatness pervades it. With the coming of winter, James Cullen anticipates that every apartment will be occupied. It affords easy access to all business and social centers and the whole building and the plan is a distinct addition to Janesville.

Teachers Meet Monday; J. H. S. Principal Back

Teachers are expected to arrive here Monday from out of town in time to attend the meeting of all teachers of the high and grade schools at the high school Monday at 2 p. m. Supt. Frank O. Holt will outline the program and policy for the next year.

The J. H. S. C. A., which has assumed charge of the work of locating the teachers in desirable rooms, has had only four calls so far but expects there will be an influx of teachers Monday which they will be able to handle properly. Cars will be furnished for the teachers.

School will open Tuesday morning. Principal George Bassford returned Friday from Chicago where he took a five weeks' course at the University of Chicago. Seniors enroll at 9 a. m. Juniors at 9:30 a. m.; sophomores at 10; freshmen A. at 10:30; freshmen B. at 1:30 p. m. and 8 A's at 3 p. m. So as to help alleviate the crowded condition children are cautioned not to come to school until the proper time.

FORECLOSURE ACTION IS AGAINST SIEBER

Charles Collett is not a defendant in the land contract foreclosure action filed in circuit court, Thursday, only so far as he is the tenant now occupying the property involved. P. J. E. Wood, attorney for the Carne-Woods company, stated Saturday. Although Mr. Collett is not a party to the land contract, it is necessary under legal procedure to name him in the action.

Mr. Wood stated. The action primarily is against Christian Fred Sieber. The item in the Gazette Thursday gave the impression that Mr. Collett was being foreclosed, which is an error.

Choosing the Family Milk Supply

One housewife buys her milk from a certain source because the "dairyman has delivered milk to her for years." Another buys hers from another source because of lodge affiliations of her husband. Another buys hers from another dairy because the time of its delivery in her neighborhood just suits her. And so the reasons go, for these are only a few of the many commonly given.

These are all very good reasons, if the other factors are equal; if the customer has personally investigated the source of the supply and knows that every step of the way from the cow to her home the milk has been safe-guarded by every precaution known to science. But if the milk is not so protected, how trivial and superficial these reasons are.

Who, in a crisis, would choose a doctor solely because they had known him for years, or belonged to the same lodge as the husband or was pleasant and agreeable, if he did not have the highest ability to treat disease?

It is purely because our milk is shown to be a Health Promoter and Disease Preventer, that it is so largely used in this city today.

“The Love Pendulum”

By MARION RUBINCAM

CHAPTER XIII.
RUMORS

Looking back today, from the experience of several years, I realize that I was not in love with Win at all. I could not have been in love.

For there I was, barely 20 years old, with an amazing amount of experience and sophistication in some ways, and an amazingly dense ignorance in others. Other men had tried to make love to me—silly old men, I am sure, but I thought I was a “gaily” mannered, callow youth from college who danced all the newest steps and murmured my ear all the sentimental sentences that had read in cheap magazines; worldly wise men who wondered how far I would let them go; and just plain nice, chummy, men who thought that every girl expected a certain amount of attention.

These men, from my own world, I knew how to handle. Even at 13, when I was in school, I had been well versed in the art that my father taught me for what he called my “cleverness.”

And because I was used to this other type I was in complete ignorance of the type I met in this out-of-the-way town. Winthrop Taylor had fascinated me. No other man had ever appealed to me. Winthrop had a lack of knowledge that I took for idealism.

Yet today I can see that he was not in love that evening either. He appeared to me as a young man who had never known just as he had appeared to me because he was pretty from those early days of youth, and it was a delicate sort of prettiness that was accentuated by my recent illness—and I did have a manner of talking and acting that made me unique in the village girls. It was not my fault nor to my credit—it was the result of different training.

So when Winthrop told his arms around me suddenly, I knew I was now that he was not really in love. But that night I did not know it. Some feminine instinct made me feel away a little. But Win kept both my hands.

“Come,” he said, with a little laugh, half trembling in his voice. “I am awfully in love with you. Are you in love with me?”

Even in the way he said he loved me there was something of a child, and a little humorous recognition of that very quality.

“Are you?” he repeated, when I did not answer.

BEAUTY CHATS by Edna Kent Forbes

I am very glad to see from my correspondence that as many women are interested in reducing today as two or three years ago when we first began to discuss scientific methods of reduction. In fact, I am inclined to think that more women are interested in the most difficult one to begin with. At first it seems so frightfully complicated to find out the caloric value of foods and to sit down and figure out yourself the actual arithmetic value of every least little thing that you eat, and yet the method is simple because it has been scientifically worked out by experts. Besides it has been proved again and again by the number of women who have taken the trouble to find out about calories, and who have reduced as a consequence.

I have simplified the whole subject as much as I possibly can, and when I talk about it I do it in as untechnical a way as possible. I will give you a few hints to help you.

First you must find out what you weigh.

Then you must find out exactly how much you are eating.

Lastly you must find out exactly what you should eat.

To simplify things as much as possible I have prepared a couple of charts which will solve the last three problems. One is a table of weights from which you can find what you should weigh, the other is a table of caloric values. I will gladly mail these to anyone who asks them if she will, for convenience, enclose a self-addressed stamped envelope with her request.

C. L.—Smoke one less each day, so you will not feel any bad effects from it. If your mother knows you have been doing this and is anxious for you to give it up, she will be the one to help you. Why not confide in her and if it is necessary she will have the doctor give you something that is if you need it. It would help you if you could persuade your brother to join with you in breaking the habit. Get into a sporting spirit with him and see which can accomplish it first.

Peggy—Olive oil makes a nourishing massage. Cocoa butter is also a good one. Consult the doctor about the thin red veins in your face. If you are full blooded, a change in diet may relieve these veins.

Blue Eyes—Massage the scalp with hot crude oil the night before the usual shampoo and if the condition continues, have a doctor addressed, envelope for a formula for a tonic.

Heart and Home Problems

BY ELIZABETH THOMPSON.
Letters May be Addressed to Mrs. Thompson, In Care of the Gazette.

Dear Mrs. Thompson: I have a good friend who is two years older than I. I think a great deal of him and do not like to lose his friendship. He has no parents and his sisters and brothers are living far from here and doesn't have a very good time. They expect a great deal of work done by him.

Before school closed I asked him to come over. He couldn't because he had to go with his aunt and uncle. Later I asked him to write. He hasn't yet. Do you suppose his relatives watch him too closely to allow him to write? He writes very few other letters and they know to whom they go.

Could I write to him, or could I plan a little party and send him an invitation, requesting him to come? Please tell me what I should do as I do not want to drop our friendship. I have known him for about five years and I trust his heart. I cannot drop him now.

ANXIOUS K. D. L. G.

To write to the young man or to plan a party to get him to write to you would be running a great risk. You have done all that you should do to show him that you are his friend. His relatives may not have as strong a hold on him as you imagine. If he really wanted to write with you he would be able to find a way.

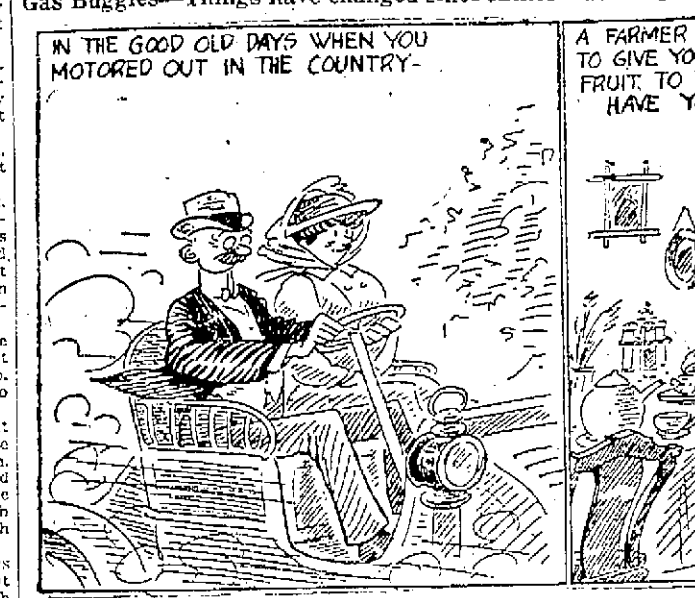

Dear Mrs. Thompson: I have a friend I have been going to see nearly two years. He is high-spirited, but he falls out often. It is always his fault, because I try to do what I think is right. He is high-spirited, but he falls out quickly, but he always comes back sorry. I don't know how much I care for him until he stays away a while and then I am almost crazy. I haven't heard from him for some time now. I don't know where he is. Do you think he will ever let me hear from him? It is his fault, more excited than I am. I don't know if you think I ought to write him or not. I think you ought to drop the young man entirely since he is so high-spirited and then gave the orders to his men, who rushed to meet the Indians. Both sides fought Indian-fashion, dodging from tree to tree and taking advantage of every bit of cover. The fighting was in close range and in the smoke-filled forest frontiersman and Indian came hand to hand—tomahawk against tomahawk.

Late in the afternoon the Indians gave up, but there was no rout. Cornstalk was too good a general for that and the Americans paid dearly for every foot of ground they won. That night the Indians held possession of the battlefield, but he had won at the terrible cost of 17 men killed and 100 wounded.

In a few words, here's our problem: said Inspector Stenrod, with a weary smile. "We have reason to believe that most of our automobile thefts are committed by a very slick gang."

The lender has a car of his own, and he drives close to the car to get a look over, enough to tell him if and where it is locked. Then he gets out of his car, walks away, returns in a few minutes, climbs in the car to be a look at once and he's away."

"Very well thought out, Inspector," commented Wellington Fields. "And an hour or two later the confederate comes along and drives off with the principal thief's car."

"Exactly. Now we've chased the get anywhere trace the king of motor thieves. Just today he got away with a new $5,000 car. Only a few minutes ago, in fact, his car is down near the City Hall Park and waiting for the confederate. I thought maybe you could tell something from the car itself. It just looks like an ordinary old car to us. Perhaps you might want to shadow the confederate when he comes to drive it away."

"No, thank you. No shadowing of experienced motor thieves for me, so long as they are in cars," replied the detective grimly. "But I will have a look at that car. I'll be along in one minute."

"This is not so easy," said the great detective, when he and the inspector were strolling a quick glance at the master thief's automobile as they casually walked past it. "The car tells a little, but not as much as I hoped."

The tanned vacationist returned gleefully to his office.

"I suppose you enjoyed some wonderfully quiet nights while on your camping trip," he was asked.

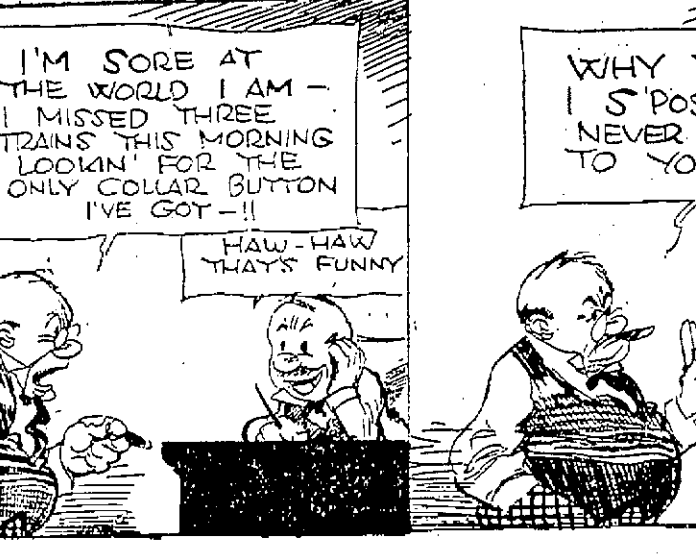

"Quiet, nothing!" snorted the tired business man. "Between the chirping of the crickets and the ukelele solos of a party of college boys in the next camp I never closed an eye!"

The tanned vacationist returned gleefully to his office.

"I suppose you enjoyed some wonderfully quiet nights while on your camping trip," he was asked.

"Quiet, nothing!" snorted the tired business man. "Between the chirping of the crickets and the ukelele solos of a party of college boys in the next camp I never closed an eye!"

In a few words, here's our problem: said Inspector Stenrod, with a weary smile. "We have reason to believe that most of our automobile thefts are committed by a very slick gang."

The lender has a car of his own, and he drives close to the car to get a look over, enough to tell him if and where it is locked. Then he gets out of his car, walks away, returns in a few minutes, climbs in the car to be a look at once and he's away."

"Very well thought out, Inspector," commented Wellington Fields. "And an hour or two later the confederate comes along and drives off with the principal thief's car."

"Exactly. Now we've chased the get anywhere trace the king of motor thieves. Just today he got away with a new $5,000 car. Only a few minutes ago, in fact, his car is down near the City Hall Park and waiting for the confederate. I thought maybe you could tell something from the car itself. It just looks like an ordinary old car to us. Perhaps you might want to shadow the confederate when he comes to drive it away."

"No, thank you. No shadowing of experienced motor thieves for me, so long as they are in cars," replied the detective grimly. "But I will have a look at that car. I'll be along in one minute."

"This is not so easy," said the great detective, when he and the inspector were strolling a quick glance at the master thief's automobile as they casually walked past it. "The car tells a little, but not as much as I hoped."

"The car tells a little, but not as much as I hoped," said the detective.

"Now, take off your coat, stand up like a man and fight me if you can. I will give you a chance to defend yourself, but I'll tell you right now that I am going to give you the licking of your life. I am going to give it to you for many reasons: First, because I have heard that you often beat your wife and children; second, because you stole the horse and goat; third, because you are a coward and an all-around bad fellow, and richly deserve it."

The cowardly peddler got down on his knees and prayed the boys' father not to touch him and his boys' father to repeat the offenses. He protested that much that had been told about him was false, but his pleadings were of no avail.

"Did you show mercy when your little child was mired played you not to strike them? No, you did not, so do not ask mercy of me," and with that the boys' father grabbed the peddler by the nape of the neck, shook him as if he had been a rat and gave him an all-around good pounding.

When he had finished, he said: "There now, I hope that will teach you a lesson and if ever I hear of your laying a finger on your wife or children except it be in kindness I will come after you and pound you again even harder than I have this time."

The peddler lost no time in getting up and sneaking down the road, but just before he passed out of sight he turned and shook his fists at the boys' father, at the same time shouting: "I'll have you arrested for this!"

The words had hardly left his mouth when he felt the chill of two hands clutching his neck. He was the one who is arrested, and that for breaking into Mr. West's barn and stealing his horse and goat.

The peddler protested that he had never broken into any man's barn, and that he had found the horse and goat on the road, but of course he was not believed, and he was blamed for the other thief's act and the matter was not cleared up until it was tried out in court.

That same afternoon the boys' father hitched up his team to a light wagon, tied Frisky on behind, put the two boys up in the seat beside him, and told the boys to follow, and drove over to Mr. West's to return the stolen horse and goat. He refused the reward offered, which was a big one, so Mr. West started a bank account for the two boys, which made them feel very happy and proud.

"Oh, you darling Billy! Are you back again, sound and well?" said Nanette when she saw Billy being led into the yard after his and Frisky's five days of adventure.

PART ONE
By the end of October, when the dispersal of that college which has served all summer long as a pleasant screen for whatever small privacy may exist between American neighbors, we were to get our autumn high tides of gossip. At this season of the year, in our towns of moderate size and ambition, where apartment houses have not yet been built, and at the same time the population, one may see a visual command of back yard beyond back yard, both up and down the street, especially if one takes the trouble to sit for an hour or so, daily, upon the top of a high board fence at about the middle of a block.

Of course an adult, who followed such a course would be thought peculiar; no doubt he would be subject to undesirable comment, and presently might be called upon to parry severe if, indeed, not hostile inquiries; but here are considered as innocuous, that they have gathered for themselves any privileges denied their parents and elders; and a boy can do such a thing as this to his content, without anybody's thinking about it at all. So it was that Herbert Hingsworth Atwater, Jr., aged thirteen and a few months, sat for a considerable time upon such a fence, after school hours, every afternoon of the last week in October; and only one person particularly observed him or was stimulated to any mental activity by his presence. Even at that time, the boy was affected only because she was Herbert's relative, and of an age sympathetic to his—and of a sex antipathetic.

In spite of the fact that Herbert Hingsworth Atwater, Jr., thus seriously disporting himself on his father's back fence, attracted only this audience of one, and that one at a rather distant window, his behavior really should have been considered plausibly interesting by anybody. After climbing to the top of the fence he would produce a memorandum book and a pencil; seldom putting these implements to immediate use. His expression was gravely alert; his manner more than his necessities, and he could have failed to comprehend that he was enjoying himself, especially when his attitude became tense—as at times it certainly did. Then he would look down at his memorandum book, and his feet aligned one before the other on the inner rail, a foot below the top of the boards, and with eyes dramatically shielded beneath a grotesque palm, he would gaze sternly in the direction of some object or motion which had attracted his attention; and then, having satisfied himself of nothing, he would look back at his book again and decisively enter a note in his memorandum book.

He was not always alone; he was frequently joined by a friend, male, and, though "Sheldon" Herbert was quite as old; and this companion was inspired, it seemed, by motives precisely similar to those from which sprung Herbert's own action. Like Herbert, he would sit upon the top of the high fence, usually at a little distance from him; like Herbert he would rise at intervals, for the better sight of something of this side of the horizon; then, also concluding like Herbert, he would sit again and write firmly in a little notebook. And seldom in the history of the world have any sessions been witnessed by participants with so intentional an appearance of importance.

That was what most injured their lone observer at the somewhat distant back window; but at her own place of residence, she found their importance almost impossible to bear without screaming. Her provocation was great; the important importance of Herbert and his friend, impressively maneuvering upon their force, was so extreme as to be all too plainly visible across four intervening broad back fences.

THE CITY MANAGER NEW PLAN CORRECTS COMMISSION FAULTS

BY H. S. GILBERTSON

(This is the sixth of 14 articles on the City-Manager plan, by H. S. Gilbertson of the National Municipal League.)

Though the commission plan marked a revolutionary advance over the traditional mayor-and-council form of city government, the new plan has not been without its faults. In its internal organization, it often placed, in the first place, the most important and important of the five men elected to the commission was personally qualified to take active charge of, say, the department of public works or the department of finance. Popular election proved to be the wrong way to select minor technical tasks; the electorate is interested first of all, and quite rightly, in representation—in voting for one of "our kind of people."

To this extent, the plan tended to become unrepresentative and un-democratic. There was, for example, no commission in which a labor representative would be appropriate. And no high-grade business man could afford to interrupt his private career for a short term on a salary. There was often, also, too much inclination on the part of individual commissioners to see the needs of their particular departments above those of the city as a whole and to form combinations for "log-rolling" purposes.

For what I want in my department and I let you have your way in your department," they said, and five-headed government was the result. Each commissioner grabbing appropriations for his own department and nobody watching the tax rate. Another important defect in the system lay in the lack of a single executive head. Five men, deriving their authority all from the same source, were to par with each other. The commission as a whole might issue orders to its individual members, but who could compel willing, loyal obedience? How then, should the good in commission government be conserved and these defects avoided? The city-manager plan has proven the answer to this important question; otherwise, the movement toward democracy might have been discredited. In the manager plan, commissioners (councilmen) are not elected with the idea of running the city, but as a technical department. Their sole function is to represent, to be a jury, fair samples of the people, to know all about local public sentiments and to express them in the form of resolutions to a technical non-political administrative force at city hall. Labor men are among the most successful of commissioners, as are the manager cities. And women are available for these posts. Moreover, the demands upon a commissioner's time, when his duties are limited to his own department, are light. The job of commissioner becomes something to which any citizen may aspire. Thus the field of available material for the commission plan is greatly widened. The choice need not and does not drift toward professional politicians who find the salary attractive, since city-manager towns give only nominal compensation to their commissioners (councilmen). A striking feature of the city-manager movement is the appearance as high-grade councilmen of men who never were willing to go into politics before. Nor is there any temptation in the council toward partiality toward particular departments, since each member is equally responsible with the others for the welfare of the city in all departments. Twelve cities have changed over to the commission plan, among them Wichita, Colorado Springs. Many others are debating it. Des Moines itself, being one, and there are numerous towns which would have changed long ago if they could have gotten away from legal restrictions. (Next Article: Of Interest to Taxpayers.)

ing. "What are they doing?" "Well, they're having a newspaper. They got the printing press and an office in Herbert's old stable and everything. They got somebody to give 'em some old banisters and a running fence, a house that was torn down somewhere, and then they got it stuck up in the stable loft, so it runs across with a kind of a gate in the middle of these banisters, and on one side is the printing press, and the other side they got a desk from that nasty little Henry Rooter's mother's attic and a table and some chairs, and a lamp, and they got their newspaper office. They go out and look for what's the news and write it down in ink; and then they go through the gate to the other side of the railing where the printing press is, and print it for their newspaper."

"But what do they do on the fence?" "Well, where they go to watch what the news is. Florence explained it correctly. They think they're so grand, sitting up there, poking around. They go to the places, and they ask people. That's all they said I could be." Here the lady's bitterness became strongly intensified. "They said, maybe I could be one of 'em, but I just asked if I knew anything, and they said, 'No, you mustn't use such expressions, Florence.' 'I don't see why not,' the daughter objected. 'They're a lot more used on me.' 'Then I'm very glad you didn't play with them.'"

But at this, Florence once more gave way to filial despair. "Mama, you just can't see through anything. I've said anything fifty times they ain't—aren't playing! They're getting up a real newspaper, and people buy it, and everything. They have inconsistent and pure and have got every aunt and uncle they have besides their own fathers and mothers, and some people in the neighborhood, and Kitty Silver and two or three other girls. They're going to charge twenty-five cents a year, collect-in-advance before they want the money, and even put it in a quarter last night, he told me so."

"How often do they publish their paper, Florence?" Mrs. Atwater inquired somewhat absently, having resumed her sewing. "Every week; and they're going to have the first one a week from today."

"What do they call it?" "The North End Daily Oriole. It's the silliest name I ever heard for a newspaper; and I told 'em so. I told 'em what I thought of it. I guess."

"Was that the reason?" Mrs. Atwater asked. "Was it what reason, mama?" "Was it the reason they wouldn't let you be a reporter with them?" "No!" Florence exclaimed airily. "I didn't want anything to do with their paper. But anyway I didn't make fun of their calling it the North End Daily Oriole till after they said I couldn't be in it. Then I told you."

"Florence, don't say—"

"Mama, I got to say something! Well, I told 'em I wouldn't be in their paper if they hazarded me on their bent knees; and I said if they begged me a thousand years I wouldn't be in any paper with such a crazy name; and I wouldn't tell 'em any news if I knew the President of the United States had the scarlet fever. I just politely informed 'em they could say what they liked if they were dying. I declined so much as to wipe the oldest shoes I got on."

"But why wouldn't they let you be on the paper?" her mother insisted. Upon this Florence became analytical. "Just as they could act so important. After she added as a consequence, 'They ought to be arrested.'"

ONE WIFE LEAVES

"MODERN SOLOMON"

The Maharanee of Kapurthala and her ex-husband.

The Maharanee of Kapurthala, famed for her beauty, and reputed to be the third richest woman in the world, has just been granted a divorce from her husband, the maharajah, nicknamed the "modern Solomon."

The real cause for the divorce was the refusal of the maharajah to give up his harem in India, where, it is said, he has five wives. The maharajah is a colonel in the British army and was decorated for extreme bravery on the west front in the world war.

Where Is Passenger Pigeon?

Millions once flew over Southern Wisconsin, now none is ever seen.—What became of this once so plentiful bird?

Wisconsin is the sportsman's Paradise. While it is true today that in many another state of the union, there was a time when, in the sixties and seventies that no other section of the country could boast of any better possibilities than the Badger state for the man of the gun and the man of the pen.

Particularly was it applicable to the passenger pigeon. The man of the pen, "passenger pigeon," to the young bird-hunter of the present decade and he will ask: "What is a passenger pigeon? Never heard of one, no less saw one." "You were even in the boyhood days of our fathers, when the passenger pigeon flew over this section of the state so dense that they darkened the sky. Some conservatively estimate flights at over two billion birds as they streamed across the heavens like mighty rivers."

Vanish Completely. Then a sudden they were gone. As one bird hunter says, "They had strength in their union, but their union disappeared—where, no one knows." Not to passenger pigeon, but to the young bird-hunter, is have offered huge prizes for a specimen, dead or alive. Those who have stuffed ones, treasure them beyond money value. Occasionally some one pops up and says he has seen "wild pigeons" but he is never able to prove it.

Theories as to their disappearance have been many. One Sutherland of Janesville, a hunter since he could take a rifle, has two suggestions: either they died of disease or that they were killed by a single shot in a fog and were drowned. He holds more to the latter. Says Mr. Sutherland:

Passenger pigeons were like sheep. They were followed the leader and whatever the leader did, they would copy. "What I think is that on one of their flights from the south they were coming in a line in a fog when the leader of one of the flights dropped in the water. True to their nature they all did the same thing and very likely were killed. I believe that they were all wiped out. It must have been one of the other, as they all disappeared at once."

This is a theory that has never been proved before. Mr. Sutherland draws it from the fact that once, while a cousin of his was with an uncle on the shores of Lake Michigan, he saw a flock of passenger pigeons was numerous—they saw the waves wash up thousands of birds.

Piled Up on Shore. "My uncle told me they were strewn along the shore for over a mile, piled several feet high. Others also witnessed the same thing at other times," declared Mr. Sutherland.

A description of the passenger or wild pigeon might be interesting to those who never saw one. It ranged from 14 to 25 inches. In length it was about 10 inches. It was chiefly north or along the northern borders of the United States as far west as the Dakotas and Manitoba and north to Hudson Bay. The male, the upper parts were bluish slate, shaded with olive gray on the back and shoulders and with metallic violet, gold and greenish blue on the neck and sides of the head; the wing-coverts had velvety black spots; throat, bluish slate, quickly shading into a rich reddish buff on the breast and paling into white underneath; two middle tail feathers blackish; others fading from pearl to white. The eyes were reddish. The bill black. The female was similar but the upper parts were washed more olive brown, with less iridescence, and its breast was of a grayish brown fading to white underneath.

The passenger pigeon usually appeared around Janesville in early March, coming from the south even in winter. It was very numerous in 1865 and 1876, that there were men who made a business of following them from Janesville, and clear to St. Louis and sometimes further, to trap them for market. In season, Janesville was a center for the hunters who had regular pigeon rooms here. They would catch the birds alive, stall-feed them and then ship them in barrels to the various markets, including New York, getting $4 to $4.50 a dozen for them. They could be bought alive here at times as low as 10 cents a dozen.

Large Nets Used. While killing the birds with a shot gun was a popular sport and method, the men who caught them for human consumption used large nets. To catch the passenger pigeons alive, they took advantage of its natural tendency to "follow the leader." Here is the way, Mr. Sutherland says they worked the game:

They would have what they called two "fliers." These were wild pigeons. The bird catchers always saved some live ones from year to year to use as fliers and stool pigeons. Some of them were so trained to the work that the expert catchers would not take $50 for them.

One of those pigeons would be attached to a long string and the other to a short one, the strings being fastened in a bush. They would also have a stool pigeon fastened with leather boots on its legs to a movable "stool," and with a rope running into a "bow house," four feet high, behind which the hunters hid. The net, 20 to 40 feet long and 15 feet wide, would be stretched on stakes with a rope connected to a spring pole in the "bow house" and another about its ends beyond which the net could be sprung at the right time.

Catch Dozens at Once. As the flight of pigeons have in sight, the pigeon on the long string would be let out. As it came to the end of the string it would be compelled to fall. The wild pigeons would think one of their own had dropped and down they would start to come down. Then the stool pigeon would be let out with the same happening, still convincing the passenger pigeons. The "stool" pigeon then would be manipulated and let down just behind the net, and by that time the entire flight would have been drawn to the net. As they landed on it, the net would be sprung and spread over them and catch them from six to 15 dozen at a time. Food would be spread over the net to keep the pigeons from suspecting anything and make the catch easy. The net was made of netting pigeons. One was on flight as described, which took an expert. The other was by the baiting method, scattering shelled corn or grain near or in a grove and setting a net near by. In a short time thousands of pigeons would come to feed. The pigeon catcher could trap a flock of 100 or more in a single day. Large catches were made by this baiting method than on flight.

Often the pigeon the expert would use as a stool pigeon would be so wild that he would be forced to blind it. This was done by sewing the eyelids together with a thread. When a week's time had become scarce and instead of flopping naturally by clutching its nails to the cloth-covered stool, would slip under the side and the whole scheme would be foiled.

The greatest place for passenger pigeons to rest in their flights through Wisconsin was in the Monroe woods near the city of Monroe, Green County. There was a stretch of woodland over there. Mr. Sutherland says that was particularly attractive to them. The way the hunters would do would be to get the privilege from some farmer to spread their net upon his land. Another place was at Pigeon Marsh, up the Rock River known as Crystal Springs. No netting was done here, but it was a good place for shooting.

There was one peculiarity about the flights of wild pigeons through this part of the country. At times, they would come only every other year. This was said to be due to an abundance of beech nuts in Michigan, of which they were exceedingly fond. When there were plenty of beech nuts, which would be about every other year, the birds would come here in such large numbers.

Big Scheme Fails. There was one fellow, says Mr. Sutherland, who got a notion of catching an entire flight at once by baiting. He constructed a great net, 1000 feet long and had it set near the Atten bridge. He spread it liberally with corn feed and managed to get the entire flight to drop on the net. Just as it looked as if his big idea would succeed, he slipped the net too late and lost them all. Strangest of all, the birds never came back to that spot. That man was Jack McArthur.

Another fellow had a great net on the Smith farm near the fair grounds late in the season. The flight was coming when a week's time had set in and they all left the country.

Mr. Sutherland used to do some shooting of the pigeons after he came back from the Civil war. He had an old army Springfield rifle that he bored out to make into a shotgun. He had shot 65 pigeons when his rifle clogged with dirt. Pushing his ramrod into the muzzle, it jammed and the day's shooting was over.

The sport of "pigeon" shooting in those days was not done with the clay pigeons of today. They used the live ones and had most in the Northwest and Alaska have been received by the Gazette Travel Bureau and may be seen at the Gazette Office.

Knights of Ku Klux Klan Are on the March Once More

A Parade of the Klan on Foot.

What This Order Is and Its Creed—Story of the Organization and Its Growth—
The Old Flaming Cross of 1870 Again Borne in the March

Forty-five years ago every stump in the north resounded with denunciation of the Ku Klux Klan with its night riders and its flaming cross borne as its banner.

Into the negro settlements the Ku Klux came. From the cabin was dragged a black man who had been guilty of political activity. He was whipped and given to understand that if another visit should be made he would hang to the nearest tree. The South was in the hands of the negro, ignorant and just come into citizenship. He filled most of the offices and others were occupied by Carpet Baggers, men from the north who had gone into political adventure.

Race war was on and the Ku Klux Klan was perhaps more responsible than any other thing for the suppression of the black as an office holder.

The negro had bankrupted states, lived in riotous luxury and had his heel on the white native of the South.

Afterward the Ku Klux fell into the hands of bandits, thieves and marauders. They whipped, robbed and murdered and the original reason for KKK was lost in the deluge of crime of the new legion.

From the time when Gen. Nathan B. Forrest disbanded the old KKK it has been dormant.

Suddenly a new night rider came into view.

"The unseen eyes have seen."

The Flaming Cross has begun its march. Texas has seen it and has taken sides for and against it.

Is it the old Ku Klux of reconstruction days?

Its organizers say it is.

What Is the New Ku Klux Klan

A New Empire.—read Albin W. Tourgee's book with that title and you will know what a northern man thought of the KKK—has, again, or has not.

The Ku Klux Klan is a secret society organized in the south with its national headquarters in Atlanta. In its own statement the Klan says that the idea had been forming for 14 years in the mind of William Joseph Simmons, its chief. It came into a real organization October 26, 1915, with 34 members. On Thanksgiving night the initiation was held on the top of Stone Mountain, that great pile of rock near Atlanta, Ga. The first charter was issued Dec. 4th, 1915, by the state of Georgia. William Joseph Simmons was, and so remains its Imperial Wizard. He issued his first Imperial Proclamation on July 4, 1916.

The Knights of the Ku Klux Klan claim not to be a mercenary order. Membership is given for service, not for money, and later one may present the order with $16.50.

Here is the order's own statement as to the kind and character of persons wanted in the order:

PREREQUISITES TO CITIZENSHIP IN THE INVISIBLE EMPIRE.
This order is founded upon dependable character. It is not an ultra-exclusive institution, but its membership is composed of "picked" men. No man is wanted in this order who hasn't manhood enough to assume a real OATH with serious purpose to keep the same inviolate.

No man is wanted in this order who will not or cannot swear an unqualified allegiance to the government of the United States of America, its flag and its constitution.

No man is wanted in this order who does not esteem the government of the United States above any other government, civil, political or ecclesiastical, in the whole world.

No man is wanted in this order who cannot protect himself and his fellow citizens each and every one of his oath-bound associates.

Only native-born American citizens who believe in the tenets of the Christian religion and owe no allegiance of any degree or nature to any foreign government, nation, political institution, sect, people or person, are eligible.

In Texas the Klan and anti-Klan forces have been in an armed conflict. Whether the outrages in the whipping of men and women and the tarring of both sexes has been or has not been done by Klan members is a question which is for discussion in the Lone Star state. A negro was taken from the proud Hotel Adolphus and tarred and feathered. It was claimed "he" had been paying attention to a white woman. A half dozen persons have been used in the same manner. So acute did the situation become that it became a matter of debate in the Texas legislature. Col. Simmons was asked if he upheld the actions of the Klan and he replied:

"The Knights of the Ku Klux Klan does not stand for or encourage lawlessness of any kind, but on the contrary is designed to strengthen and uphold the majesty and supremacy of the law and to make the machinery of the law so strong that the evildoer cannot live in peace and security in any community."

"We stand for the purity of the country, but we also stand for the honor and integrity of the law and new enforcement officers of the city, state and nation."

In Dallas a parade was made by Klan members around a few blocks in robes and carrying the flaming cross. It was a weird sight. After it was over the members went along the streets carrying the robe under their arms. This was something that would never have been permitted under the old Klan. That was the most secret order it has been said by members of other orders, ever instituted in America. But apparently there is less secrecy now.

The "Klan Creed." THE ORDER of the Ku Klux Klan solemnly acknowledges the majesty and supremacy of the Divine Being, and recognizes the goodness and providence of the same.

WE HAVE relation to the Government of the United States of America, the Supremacy of its Constitution, the Union of States hereunder, and the Constitution of Laws thereof, and we shall be ever devoted to the sublime principles of a pure Americanism and valiant in the defense of its ideals and institutions.

WE AVOW THE distinction between the races of mankind as same has been decreed by loyal obedience to your constitutional authority and the constitution and laws of the fraternity. If I prove untrue as a Klansman I will willingly accept as my portion whatever penalty your authority may impose. The required dictation accompanies this application.

THE INVISIBLE EMPIRE

Story of the Old Ku Klux

ENOUGH is known of the present revival of the one time powerful night riding organization of the South to designate it as no more than a modern fraternal organization which has been resurrected by Colonel W. J. Simmons of Atlanta, Ga., as a memorial to the original Ku Klux Klan, as a fraternal organization it was chartered in the state of Georgia in the latter part of 1915. Much of the trappings of the original Klan has been retained: it resembles that of fifty years ago in having the "same spirit and purpose, but a different material form; the same soul in a new body." Further, the Simmons organization appears to have a more business-like way about it than that of the old night riders. The Klan is organized along military lines and the leader is surrounded by a staff and staff officers. The executive offices of the organization occupy the third floor of a downtown office building in Atlanta and spread over half a dozen other rooms in another building.

Origin of the Klan. Not so was the Ku Klux Klan in the days of reconstruction. Springing up almost spontaneously in the late '60s, at first vague of form and nebulous of purpose, it overran the whole of the South in a few months, rose to heights of unquestioned power and then officially vanished from the scene as mysteriously and completely as though it had never existed.

For years after little or nothing was known of the inner workings of the Klan, who were its members, how it came into being. Only those who had been initiated into its secrets during the short years it flourished had any knowledge of the Klan, and these refused to tell what they knew. A committee from congress in the early '70s investigated the organization to the extent of thirteen thick volumes of testimony and beyond the external acts of the Klan, learned nothing. Not until years after was the story of the Ku Klux pieced together bit by bit and one of the strangest chapters of American history made known.

When the Civil war ended the little town of Pulaski, Tenn., welcomed home the young men of the village who had served through the hard campaigns of the war and who, for the most part, were no older than the mass of college students of today. The vanquished South immediately after the war was a dull place for young men in many respects; there was little or nothing to occupy their time, and Pulaski in 1866 was doubtless rather tame to fellows who had seen Pickens' charge at Gettysburg or galloped over the country with Morgan and Wheeler. Assembled in a law office one evening in May, 1866, the Pulaski young men discussed ways and means of lulling their boredom. One suggested a club or society. An organization with no very definite purpose was effected that evening. At a subsequent meeting the matter of the name was mentioned and the Greek word "Kuklos" meaning "a circle" was forthcoming. From "Kuklos" it was an easy step to Ku Klux and to that it was inevitable that the word "Klan" should form an alternative addition.

That Was Beginning. Such was the beginning of the Ku Klux Klan, and historians have agreed in saying that the Klan would not have wielded the immense power that it did had it not borne this name, or one equally as mysterious. Had the men called themselves "The Jolly Jokers" or "The Adelpheis," for instance, their little would not have scared anyone.

Once established, the Ku Klux Klan soon lost its social club side and grew like a weed. The Klan's meeting places were called "dens," and the officers of each den were the Grand Cyclops, or presiding officer; the Grand Magi, or vice president; the Grand Exchequer, or treasurer; and two Lectors, who were the outer and inner guards of the "den."

Negro Arrogance. The arrogance of the lower type of negroes increased during the reconstruction days—urged on to a great degree by "carpet baggers" who infected the South from the North. They had practically their own way at the voting polls, they were insolent to the highest degree to their former masters, and they needed a firm hand on them to hold them down to any sort of obedience to the law. Indeed, they became lawbreakers themselves until blacks controlled the legislatures of six southern states.

To put down this black menace the Ku Klux Klan "dens" grew up all over the South, and masked bands paraded constantly at night. The Klan's main weapon against the negro was terrorism—they did not harm blacks so much as they scared them.

Klansmen would gallop up to negro shanties and their leader would command a drink of water.

The negroes, with trembling hands, would supply a cupful.

"Bring me a bucket," the leader would say.

Drinking a Bucket of Water. The negroes would obey—and, to their complete terror, the leader would drain the bucket to its dregs.

"That's the first drink I've had since Shiloh," the leader would say, hand back the empty bucket and dash away with his men. The negroes did not know the leader had a large bladder concealed underneath his robe, into which he was pouring the water.

The old-day Ku Klux Klan was broken up in 1869 for the reason that it would make operations under masks impossible—no matter how beneficial their original purpose. Armed and masked bands of marauders ranging up all over the South doing terrible deeds of violence, all of which were laid to the Ku Klux Klan.

State governments started operating against the Klan and it was soon "The Adelpheis," for instance, their little would not have scared anyone.

Once established, the Ku Klux Klan soon lost its social club side and grew like a weed. The Klan's meeting places were called "dens," and the officers of each den were the Grand Cyclops, or presiding officer; the Grand Magi, or vice president; the Grand Exchequer, or treasurer; and two Lectors, who were the outer and inner guards of the "den."

The arrogance of the lower type of negroes increased during the reconstruction days—urged on to a great degree by "carpet baggers" who infected the South from the North. They had practically their own way at the voting polls, they with one yell of terror he dropped the reins and was gone. To his dying day he would affirm: "He done it, suah, boss. I seed him do it." The horseman's robe was fastened by a draw string over the top of the wearer's head. Over this was worn an artificial skull made of a large gourd or of pasteboard. Straps gave rise to a general belief among the negroes that the Ku Kluxers could take themselves to pieces.

White Supremacy. Thus having acquired a reputation among the negroes, and realizing the power to control the newly freed slaves despite a congress that was bent on conferring upon the negro the full rights of citizenship, the Ku Klux Klan discovered that there was a serious work it could do in the South. But already there was apparent the foot that the secret order which the Klan operated was conducive to certain abuses. The increasing numbers of clansmen and the inability to keep out entirely certain undesirable men from the order, a cloak for personal ends, for even the committing of misdemeanors or more serious crimes, was beginning to give the Klan a bad name.

Deference to "Officers." The Klan, up to that time bound together only by a general deference to the grand cyclops of the Pulaski "den," was organized into the "Invisible Empire of the South," in which the Klan now that it had serious objects, were defined. They were: To protect the people from indignities and wrongs; to succor the suffering, particularly the victims of dead Confederate soldiers; to defend "the Constitution of the United States," and all laws passed in conformity thereto, and of the states, and to act in executing all constitutional laws.

General Forest at the Head. From this time on the Klan put itself more in evidence. Blatant parades were frequent in many places. It openly worked against un-purified negroes, against the carpetbagger and the scalawag who, riding into power upon the negro vote, were haunting the best traditions of the old South. The effectiveness of the order was shown wherever, by its original methods, it exerted itself to quiet disturbed communities. But the order had grown too large, it was too widespread, the general authority was too remote from the local "dens" and the general scheme was too easily grasped and copied by lawless elements outside of the Klan; it quickly felt out the inevitable law that the regulation of society, the well-being of law and order itself must rest in the hands of a visible and not an invisible government.

Hostile to Klan. In Tennessee the governor was bitterly hostile to the Klan. He was a mountaineer from the eastern part of the state who did not hold with the traditions of the South and whose sympathies had never been with the Klan. By September, 1868, Governor Brownlow had induced a special session of the Tennessee legislature to pass a statute aimed directly at the Klan. The members of the order were practically outlawed. In February, 1869, Governor Brownlow proclaimed martial law in several Tennessee counties because of the Ku Klux activities therein. The growing evils within the order, as well as the order to disband was none other than Gen. Nathan Bedford Forrest.

Other Klans. But with the official ending of the Ku Klux Klan, night riding did not cease in the South. The idea had so permeated the southern states that it was not until several years later that it was entirely or almost entirely stopped. It has never completely died out. Nor was the Ku Klux Klan the only night riding band. The Knights of the White Camellia was probably the largest and most important of them all, though strangely enough it figures little in the memory of the time. The "Pale Faces," the "Constitutional Union Guards," the "White Brotherhood," were other names borne by bands of men who did Ku Klux work during the reconstruction and after in the South.

If one asks of the "movement," "Was it necessary?" the answer is: "At least, may be answered: that no other means of serving the South in a time of need could have been done as well. If one asks, 'Was it successful?' the answer is plain: it was it preserved the South to the South-erner. If one asks, 'Was it justifiable?' the answer is harder to give.

Letter Shows Gratitude For Educational Bonus Madison.—The effect of the soldier's educational bonus act in aiding former service men in securing an education is said to be shown in a letter received by E. A. Fitzpatrick, secretary of the state board of education, from an ex-service man.

Major Fitzpatrick said that the letter exemplifies the general expression of service men toward the state for its action in affording them an opportunity to be paid for attendance at school. The letter, addressed to the board, follows:

"I don't know of any other way of thanking the taxpayers of my home state for the aid I received while in school through the Wisconsin soldier bonus than to thank you, so I am taking this opportunity of expressing my whole-hearted thanks and appreciation for their thoughtfulness and interest in the ex-service men."

"I am almost certain that without the bonus I could not have finished my college course. I shall always be indebted to the taxpayers of my home state, Wisconsin."

In reply to a parliamentary inquiry, the assistant postmaster-general of the United Kingdom stated that the number of telephones in use in the British Isles on December 1, 1920, was 388,500.

The Spineograph X-Ray is the Last Word in — CHIROPRACTIC EFFICIENCY

An X-Ray Spineograph proves all that Chiropractic claims. With the Spineograph X-Ray-plate, before him the Chiropractor can see plainly the exact position of every vertebrae in the spine and avoids all possibility of overlooking the condition that may be the exact cause of your illness.

The Spineograph takes a picture of the backbone in the human body just as clearly as you take small kodak pictures. Looking at this picture the Chiropractor can quickly and correctly diagnose the condition of your spine, see just which segment is out of line and proceed intelligently and logically to treat the cause of your disease.

Since installing the Spineograph X-Ray laboratory several years ago hundreds of cases have been treated successfully. The Spineograph X-Ray is a distinct help to the science of Chiropractic. If you suffer from disease there is no need to suffer longer. Call on the Chiropractor. Let him explain in detail what Chiropractic science aided by the Spineograph X-Ray has been able to do for suffering humanity. Do not despair.

BUICK

Presenting The New Buick Four

The new Buick Four is a distinctively Buick creation in every feature of design and construction. It embodies those principles of construction that have characterized Buick automobiles for more than twenty years.

The engine is of the famed Buick Valve-in-Head type. The bore is 3 1/2" — the stroke, 4 1/4". Wheel base, 109", turning radius, 36'.

A Marvel carburetor with the new automatic heat control insures proper vaporization of the common low grade of commercial gasoline.

Multiple disc clutch, the transmission and universal joint are of standard Buick construction—the universal joint being lubricated from the transmission.

The rear axle is the three-quarter floating type, with semi-elliptical type springs front and rear. The frame is a deep channel section, strongly re-inforced with four cross members.

High pressure Alemite system provides lubrication. Delco equipment with Exide battery insures efficient starting, lighting and ignition.

All models have non-glare headlights—lenses—all are complete with tire carrier and extra rim. Closed models are equipped with adjustable windshield visors, windshield cleaner, dome light, ventilating windshield, adjustable windows, and sun shade in rear window.

HINTS FOR THE MOTORIST

ALBERT L. CLOUGH

Copyright, 1921, by the International Syndicate
The Much-Abused Spare Tube

Many Never See Service, Being Ruined By Neglect

EARLY EVERY MOTORIST CARRIES one or more extra inner tubes, even if his "ready-rated" tire and rim equipment is ample. Oftentimes these reserve tubes are not required for months at a time and lie idle, somewhere about the car, but when they are wanted, they are usually wanted badly and too often are then found in unserviceable condition, through neglect. Spare tubes should be kept in one of the oilproof enamel-cloth bags, specially made for this purpose and not loose in the toolbox or under the seat and they should be properly folded and well covered with talc powder. In order to forestall disappointments the tubes selected as "standbys" and their valves—unless they are brand new—should be tested by inflating them fully and letting them remain in that condition overnight, to make sure they are perfectly tight. The proper method of folding is as follows: Remove the valve-plunger and, beginning at the point opposite the stem, roll it into a tight ball, to remove all the air, replacing the valve-plunger and cap, while it is still rolled, then lay it flat on a table with the valve stem in the middle and pointing up. Fold each half once, centrally toward the valve-stem and bring both folded halves together, with the valve-stem lying between them, which will make a compact bundle of eight thicknesses of tube, with the stem placed neatly within it, then slip a rubber band around each end of the bundle and stow it away, preferably in a side pocket, or where it will not be subject to injury from heavy tools.

PREMATURELY WORN TIMING GEARS

T. M. J. writes: Although I have had my car but three months, my repairmen claim that my timing gears are badly worn and out of adjustment. He advises their replacement and that of the crankshaft in case the new gears do not make matters right. What can have been the reason for these parts giving out so soon? I have always kept all parts lubricated. I make these replacements what can I do to prevent the same thing from happening again?

Answer: If they were properly installed in the beginning and you have kept the engine well lubricated, we cannot imagine what has caused these gears to fail unless one or both of them became loose on their shafts. If this occurred, it probably ruined the gear keyway and the keyway in the shaft and is attributable to faulty assembling at the factory. Even in case of lubrication failure, the pistons would stick or the bearings burn out long before the gears would suffer. If the damage resulted from the gears getting loose, we think that you have at least a moral claim against the factory or its representative. With good engine lubrication, timing gears should last at least as long as the cylinders keep round.

DRIVING LIGHT IS POOR

W. J. R. asks: Is there any way in which I can treat the reflectors of my headlights so that they will light the road better? They now give a very poor light.

Answer: If they are merely dusty or slightly tarnished, you can clean their surfaces with alcohol on absorbent cotton or, if necessary, go over them with a fine silver polish and chamois leather, but if they are rusted or the silver surface is spoiled, they will have to be replaced or new ones obtained. Are you sure that the bulbs are so located in the reflectors as to be correctly focussed? You will probably find an adjustment by which the bulbs can be drawn slightly in or out of the reflectors and they should be so set that, with the car placed at a distance of ten feet or so from a flat surface, such as a house wall, both lamps will cast equal, evenly illuminated circles of light upon it. Both lamps should be tipped at such angles, vertically and horizontally, that the beams are cast in such directions as to strike the road in the most advantageous manner. If there are no adjustments for altering the angular setting, the lamp brackets can probably be bent enough to give results.

Questions of general interest to the motorist will be answered by Mr. Clough in this column, space permitting. If an immediate answer is desired, enclose self-addressed, stamped envelope.

Get First Hand FACTS

About Your Battery

Batteries will wear out—nobody can stop that, but in a good many cases the embarrassment would be less if the owner knew his battery had "one foot in the grave," and was apt to die any time. When anything like that happens we feel that we have failed in our effort to get your car and tell you the facts—the condition of your battery. One of our most important duties is to tell you—whether you own a Willard Threaded Rubber Battery or not—just how that battery stacks up. Come in.
